Architects and designers often craft a backstory for a house. It helps to make decisions and create a unique point of view. The inspiration that guided this home was the idea of a European stone farmhouse, grounded in the terrain, that blends with the landscape organically. Keeping a sense of human warmth and scale, it was designed with windows that frame the ocean and mountain views and maximize light.

This is the heart of the home. The main living area has dramatically pitched 16'9" ceilings framing a million dollar ocean view. The interior of the home is a love letter to Malibu featuring views of the Pacific Ocean, blue skies, fluffy clouds and Malibu's iconic marine layers that drift in to cool the shores of southern California.

Other design elements include several wrap around porches including screened-in porch, eight-foot doors and windows throughout, 9'6" ceilings in bedrooms and kitchen. Sustainably designed to its environment with drought-resistant landscaping. Design complies with all current building codes as approved by County of Los Angeles to obtain RTI. Surface is real stone that reflects the color of the Santa Monica mountains.

The Sawasys are award-winning architect and designers

They designed the plans for this home as their own place to wind down and get away. After an extensive search, they found and purchased this land in 2020 pre-covid, and were looking forward to building a getaway on this iconic view property.

They completed all the plans and permits and were about to press “go” when they learned that their grandkids’ family had decided to move away. With this curveball, they changed their plans with some regret, but not until completing all the plans for this dream home.

Included with purchase is 40 hours of architect’s time to adjust finishes at the buyer’s request.

It's rare to find and own a site like this, a flat pad in Malibu for single story under 2000 sf home with soon-to-be approved plans.

Land with plans for a house this comfortable size plus dramatic architectural features does not come along often.
